Support Excellence

Dear Fellow Students of History,

The University of Arizona History Department is leading the way in uncovering the mysteries of the past and we want you to participate in its efforts by joining The Clio Society. What exactly is The Clio Society? It is an organization that will enable you to join others interested in the pursuit of knowledge and to support the growth of one of the University's most treasured and valuable departments.

Named for the mythological character known for her passion for learning, The Clio Society enables you to advance historical research and support public higher education through participation in community events and contributions to the History Department's scholarship and research funds. Clio, who was often depicted accompanied by her chest of books, symbolizes the life-long learning that the History Department seeks to advance through its academic and outreach programs. Join us and help us discover the riches of the past ~ both the known and the heretofore unknown ~ by supporting the academic missions of our diverse department.

As you know, public universities are increasingly reliant upon private money to sustain the quality of our research and teaching. For only $250 a year, you can make a significant difference. That contribution will go to support visiting scholars, fund faculty research and excellence in teaching awards, and to bring history to Tucson and surrounding communities in Southern Arizona.

Benefits of membership include an invitation to the annual Clio Society Membership event, the opportunity to participate in the Mystery events that have become so well loved and popular in Tucson, as well as other special events. You will also have the opportunity to interact with other donors who share your interests in the deep secrets of historical discovery. And you will know that you are supporting excellence in research and higher education.

Thank you!

Karen Anderson
Professor and Head
Department of History

"The value of history is, indeed, not scientific but moral: by liberalizing the mind, by deepening the sympathies, by fortifying the will, it enables us to control, not society, but ourselves - a much more important thing; it prepares us to live more humanely in the present and to meet, rather than to foretell the future."

- Carl Becker, eminent American Historian

Wisdom of the ages

“A mature sense of historical-mindedness stimulates self-identity, enabling the individual to surmount, intellectually, his or her immediate environment and emancipating the individual, to some extent, from the pressures to conform to this year’s vogues. He or she ceases to be a pawn of the social forces and their representatives.” Carl G. Gustavson, U.S. Historian

“History is the ‘know thyself’ of humanity – the self-consciousness of mankind.”

Johann Gustav Droysen, nineteenth century German
Historian

“Reflecting on my experience on September 11th, I realize that we need the curious inquiries of scholars who seek understanding and insight rather than the political expediency of the moment. Scholars mistrust the easy answer, the pat analysis. I was pushed by professors at the University to think beyond what was in front of my eyes to seek a deeper understanding of history. The challenges our nation faced in the past four years require a renewed investment in historical study and critical thinking that can guide us through these tumultuous times.”

– James Meehan, 2004 Outstanding Alumnus

Wisdom of the ages

“In lifting the bonds of time and place, in freeing us from the tyranny of the present, history gives greater freedom and becomes the instrument enhancing liberty. Of all learned endeavors, the study of the past can be the most exciting, humanizing, broadening – and hence the most liberating.” – Stephen Vaughn, Historian, University of Wisconsin

“I wonder why we hate the past so” –
American author William Dean Howells to Mark Twain
– Twain’s reply

.....

“Americans are a people without history, with only memory, which means a people poorly prepared for what is inevitable about life – tragedy, sadness, moral ambiguity – and, therefore, a people reluctant to engage in difficult ethical issues. One of the most important things historians do is to bear witness to the past, including its horrors, in order to battle the amnesia that would sweep away all that is difficult or repugnant. The distinction between history and memory – that is, the distinction between knowledge of painful things, painfully arrived at, and notion of the past that flatter us with easy myths or cheap emotions – is at the heart of our enterprise.” Elliott J. Corn, American cultural historian, Brown University
